TUESDAY EVENING, NOV. 12 1901.

Silence You Can See. There is no such thing as silence in this world. It is an impossibility. That is partly the reason why science has enabled us to see it.

The explanation of the paradox is this: Silence, as we understand it, simply means that there are sounds too delicate or too loud for the ear to register. In other words, when we can't hear anything we call that condition 'silence." But wherever you are there are sounds around you. Even in the deepest mine the air vibrates and makes a sound. An instrument has been invented that will catch these sounds and permit of the vibrations being represented pictorially on a screen, and in that way you may see silence and properly understand what it means. By comparing the pictures of noises with those of that condition of things known as silence we gain an idea of the difference between a noisy night, for instance, and one when "absolute silence reigns," as the novelist puts it. It is rather surprising to find so much disturbance at the time when everything appears to be perfectly quiet-Pearson's Weekly.

The late Lord Savile used to say, according to The Candid Friend, "that high diplomatists had always to be on their guard against intriguing women, mainly Russian agents, who would use any wile to extract information. During the Russo-Turkish war, when Europe was always on the verge of a crisis and Russian statesmen were most anxious to know what England would do under given circumstances, a lady came up to him suddenly at a ball and said: "I hear that the Russians have made a forced march and entered Constantinople," hoping no doubt that he would be surprised into some indiscreet ex-He merely replied:

"Ineed! And I suppose the sultan has conferred on them the order of the

The lady continued gravely: "And they say in Paris that if England does not interfere the eastern question is settled in favor of Russia." "And that," replied his excellency, "is, I suppose, the new judgment of

A French writer, Henri Coupon, says that, notwithstanding the fact of their simplicity, the songs of birds cr imitated with musical instruments because of the impossibility of reproduc ing their peculiar timbre. The notes of birds, while corresponding with our musical scale, also include vibrations occupying the intervals between our notes. The duration of birds' songs is usually very short, two or three sec onds for thrushes and chaffinches, four or five seconds for blackbirds, but from two to five minutes for the lark

A Salmon's Leap.

One of the directors of the Norwegian fisheries has been endeavoring to discover the height a salmon will leap when clearing a waterfall which obstructs its passage up stream. Masts were placed below the fall to insure accurate measurements. It is stated that a fish can leap to the height of twenty feet. When a fish failed to clear the fall at one bound, it remained in the falling water and then, with a rapid twist of the body, gave a spring and was successful.

About the Limit. "Bilkins, what is the most mortifying thing you can conceive of?"

Bllkins-I guess it's when a woman's sons having grown over the head of their father, who is of small stature the thrifty mother has the outgrown clothes of her sons revamped for the old gentleman's use.—New York Times.

The piece of wood in question was common white deal from Sweden, but was remarkable for its comparative weight. It had formed part of a boat belonging to a whaler and had been dragged below the surface of the water to the depth of more than half a mille by a harpooned whale. The length of line and the short distance from the point of descent after being struck at which the whale rose to the surface was a proof of the depth to which it had dragged the boat.

Only part of the boat came up again at the end of the line, and it was taken on board when the whale had been killed. That piece of wood was so hard that it would not burn in a gas jet. The weight of water had compressed it.—London Standard.
